

Tom Ingwers

Tom Ingwers has been active in the energy business for over 30 years. Since 2010, Tom has served as Vice President of Environmental Products for Shell Energy North America (US), L.P. In this capacity, he is responsible for promoting, procuring and supplying customers with renewable energy, carbon credits and emission products across North America. From 2006 to 2010 Tom led the Business Development group for Shell Energy in the WECC, with a focus on renewable energy, conventional generation, pipes and storage.

Prior to joining Shell, Tom was the Director of Energy Trading and Contracts for Sacramento Municipal Utility District (SMUD) for 13 years where he managed SMUD's wholesale power business. He also served on the CAISO Board of Governors during the California Energy Crisis on behalf of large municipal utilities.

Prior to working for SMUD, Tom was employed in the oil and gas exploration and production business in North America with various companies

Tom and his wife, Pam, currently live in San Diego, California